Bicycle Records are Rapidly Clipping Miles

Forty miles an hour on a bleycle has been accomplished after twenty years of striving. The achievement of Wil-liam Stinson at Brockton recently was the result of thousands of improve-ments in single wheels and hundreds in pacemaking machines and of many in pacemaking machines and of many years' experimenting in pace following.

Stinson rode 46 miles 330 yards in 60 minutes behind a motor tandem and quit in good condition. It was only five years ago that the speedlest riders were seeking to attain a record of 30 miles in an hour, believing that to be about the limit. This made the sixth time that the one-hour record had been bbroken this year, and in no former year has it been lowered so many times. In 1893 and again in 1895 it was broken four times, in 1894 and 1896 it was broken five different times, twice in '97, twice in '98 and three times in '99. As Harry Elkes still has designs upon it, there is yet a possibility of a seventh lowering and on a bility of a seventh lowering and on a three-lap cement track, the same one on which Stinson made his great ride. Ever since men began to try and se how fast they could ride on bloycles the time record for one mile and the distance covered in one hour have been

On the sefety 21 miles and some yards were covered several times in 1888 and 1889, but Rowe's record was 1888 and 1889, but Rowe's record was not broken until 1890, when 22 miles 520 yards were ridden by H. Parsons at Paddington, England. The record remained aboard, either in England or France, till 1893, when L. S. Meintjes placed it to the credit of America by riding 25 miles 107 yards at Springfield, Mass. A. V. Linton captured it in Paris the next year and this country did not have it again for any appreciable space of time until 1898. The thirty-mile mark was first reached in 1896 by Tom Linton at Paris, when he rode 30 miles 214 yards. In the same year he bettered this at London.

BULLER'S OLD IRON

London, Nov. 22.-General Buller, the former commander of the British troops in Natal, in the course of a speech which he made today at Exeter, on the occasion of a sword of honor being presented to him, said he had received a quantity of old iron, sent by ome German critics while he was trying to relieve Ladysmith. He added: The laugh was on my side, because when the iron came I was inside Ladysmith."
